Pool scares to spark change

Town conducts investigation

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Town of Didsbury is considering a number of changes to the Didsbury Aquatic Centre, following two life-threatening incidents earlier this month.

Didsbury CAO Roy Brown, and Town Manager of Parks and Recreation Byron Sayer participated in an investigation that resulted in a report, including a number of recommendations that has been submitted to town council and will be reviewed at its meeting July 15.

The first of two incidents involved Nathan Thompson, 7, who was bumped by another swimmer from the confines of the waterslide and left dangling between 10 and 20 feet, before dropping into the arms of local man, Chris Cummings on June 28.

In the second incident, which occurred on June 30, Jesse Fuller of Didsbury nearly drowned while attending a public swim.

One of the possibilities for change is the volume or possible removal of music from the facility, says Mayor Brian Wittal.

"We may just decide to not have music at all, because it's noisy enough as it is," he said.

"I would think that would sort of make sense and I could see that happening."

Another possibility would be the removal of stenciled drawings that are present on the swimming pool floor.

"In the kiddies' pool, it's not bad, because it's only a foot deep," explained Wittal.

"But in the bigger pool, you can get confused as to whether that's someone floating at the bottom or is that a stencil?"

The lifeguard count per shift is also something being reviewed. According to Wittal the standard is one lifeguard per 75 occupants, with the Aquatic Centre presently running at one for 50.

"If we can, we would sure like to increase that to one for every 35, but you have to find the people," said Wittal.

"The problem is finding the quality individuals. Lifeguards are very tough to find for every pool right now."

Finally, Wittal says he likes the idea of lifeguards wearing headsets for the purpose of improving communication.

"If they have headsets, they can stay at their end of the pool, and communicate on any situations or issues more safely and still have a full view of the pool at all times."

Didsbury driver in serious collision

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Innisfail Traffic Services is investigating a collision that left one driver in serious but stable condition.

According to police, a Mazda Protégé driven by a lone 23-year-old male from Sherwood Park went off the road left and struck a GMC Sierra in the left rear, which resulted in extensive damage to both vehicles.

A 43-year-old Didsbury male, who was the lone occupant of the Sierra, left without injuries, says RCMP Cst. Norm Therrien.

Upon investigation, police believe the Protégé was travelling northbound in the left lane of Hwy. 2.

The Sierra was in a paved crossover and stopped facing westbound on Township Road 250.

Both north-and-southbound lanes on Hwy. 2 were restricted for approximately three hours.

No further information, including names, have been released by police.

Police briefs

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Didsbury RCMP responded to the following complaints between June 26 to July 9.

06-27 - RCMP attended a residence in Didsbury after receiving a complaint of rotting flesh. While the home contained maggots, and a foul odour, a police investigation found no foul play, and no trace of a corpse.

06-27 - Police investigated a gas and dash at Mac's Esso in Carstairs. Witnesses described an older style green truck pulling away with $81 worth of fuel. The registered owner of the vehicle was contacted, and explained that the incident was not an intended theft but rather a miscommunication. According to police, the man returned to pay for the gas.

06-28 - RCMP handled a complaint of parked vehicles being sprayed with paintball guns in Didsbury. The complainant said other nearby vehicles in the neighbourhood had also been hit. No damage was noted to the vehicle in question, and the paint from the incident was cleaned.

06-29 - RCMP responded to a noise bylaw breach on 18th St. in Didsbury. A witness saw teenagers partying and drinking in an open field with an open fire. Police learned the gathering was due to a high school graduation celebration. Unconsumed alcohol was dumped on scene.

06-29 - Police responded to a complaint of vandalism on Whispering Pine road in Water Valley. Cabin windows were smashed but nothing is believed to have been taken.

It is believed that an unknown male was entering the cabins in search of food.

06-30 - RCMP responded to a complaint of disturbing the peace, with a fight in progress on 15th Ave. in Didsbury.

Upon attendance, members saw that the fight had stopped and a baseball bat was present but not used in an assault.

Neither party opted to press charges against the other.

07-01 - Witnesses told police that youths estimated between the ages of 12 and 14 years old were spotted on the roof at Ross Ford Elementary school watching fireworks involved in the Canada Day celebrations. Patrols from police found that the youths were gone.

07-02 - Police responded to a complaint of public nudity in Carstairs. Witnesses told police that an unknown male was running down 10th Ave. with nothing on, at approximately 9:41 p.m.

07-02 - Police received a complaint of a group of youths hanging around the 8th hole at the Didsbury golf course at approximately 11:30 p.m.

07-03 - RCMP attended what witnesses described as a fight in progress, on 16th avenue in Didsbury at approximately 6:30 p.m. Members attended and found multiple males in the area, and police learned the physical altercation involved two males versus one, regarding a domestic situation. No charges were laid.

07-03 - A Carstairs area resident complained to police after receiving harassing phone calls regarding an advertisement in the newspaper for the sale of 600 pairs of underwear. The resident had recently closed a local business and was hoping to sell some of its leftover merchandise. On two separate occasions the unknown male called the resident. Upon investigation, police identified the caller. The complainant did not pursue charges but asked that the phone calls stop.

07-03 - A young offender was found to be shoplifting at Fas Gas in Didsbury at approximately 8:30 p.m. The subject left with two bags of Doritos, even after staff members asked the subject to pay for the items. The youth was located by RCMP and found to be visibly intoxicated.

07-09 - A male woke up to a fright after sleeping on a couch at his residence in Didsbury, and encountering an unwelcome visitor. According to the homeowner, an unknown male climbed through his residence window, and almost stepped on him while he slept. The startled intruder immediately left the premises. A patrol was made, and the RCMP found the male, who admitted to the altercation. The subject was intoxicated and lodged by police until sober.

07-09 - According to witnesses, several underaged youths were standing outside a gas station in Didsbury with open liquor, at approximately 7:30 p.m. Police attended the scene, where they disposed of the alcohol and provided warnings to the youths.

Shelter funding is money well spent

DAN SINGLETON

The Alberta government has announced that it will be providing an extra $1.7 million to fund 79 more beds in Alberta's women's emergency shelters.

The new funding, which will increase overall shelter capacity by 15 per cent, includes money for six new beds at the Central Alberta Women's Emergency Shelter.

The funding is both welcome and necessary in a province where domestic violence continues to plague cities and towns alike.

"Women's shelters do an incredible job of supporting victims of family violence as they rebuild their lives. The funding will help women's shelters provide critical support to victims when they need it most," said Janis Tarchuk, Minister of Children and Youth Services.

The province now funds 617 beds in various women's shelters, providing a place for women and their children to seek safety from dangerous situations. The shelters also provide counselling, outreach services, parenting programs, children's groups and community referrals.

"The announcement to fund additional beds makes wise use of existing emergency shelter capacity," said Joie Dery, president of the Central Alberta Women's Emergency Shelter Society. "Emergency shelters were struggling to provide full services to women and children in need of their care."

The Stelmach government should be applauded for its decision to make this new funding available. Women's shelters provide a vital public service and supporting them is money well spent.

At the same time it is important that both the provincial and federal governments should continue to provide adequate levels of funding for policing so that perpetrators of domestic violence can be held accountable. Give the police the resources and they will make perpetrators answer for their crimes.

Last week a landmark agreement aimed at fighting family violence in central Alberta was signed by ten community organizations, including RCMP and the Crown prosecutor's office.

The domestic violence court protocol agreement outlines the roles and responsibilities of each organization, something organizers hope will facilitate better overall communication and information sharing about cases coming before the courts.

"The end goal (of the agreement) is to provide safety and support to the victims and to hold the perpetrators accountable for their actions," said Patrick Dillon, with Child and Family Services.

Other organizations that signed the agreement included CAWES, Central Alberta Women's Outreach, and Alberta Justice.

Like the new shelter funding, this protocol agreement is good news for Alberta.

It is the hope of all stakeholders that domestic violence will one day be just a bad memory. Sadly, that happy day is not yet on the horizon and until it is, the province must continue to make the safety of victims and the targeting of perpetrators high priorities.

Let's clear the air on carbon taxes

DAVID SUZUKI, WITH FAISAL MOOLA

I admit: we aren't 100 per cent sure that human activity is causing global warming. So let's all go home in our SUVs and join an "axe the tax" campaign. Come to think of it, we aren't sure that our houses will be robbed, flooded or burned to the ground, so let's cancel our home insurance while we're at it.

After all, the vast majority of the world's climate scientists will only admit to being 90 per cent certain that our carbon emissions are causing global warming on such a scale that we face global catastrophe if we fail to change our ways. If nine out of 10 doctors said your child needed an immediate operation, would you wait until all 10 agreed? James Hansen, a leading climate expert who raised the alarm about global warming to the U.S. Congress 20 years ago, says he's 99 per cent sure, but that's still not 100 per cent, so why should we pay more by way of a carbon tax to address a problem that may not exist?

True, a report prepared by M.K. Jaccard and Associates for the David Suzuki Foundation titled Pricing Carbon: Saving Green argued persuasively that a carbon tax is an effective tool for bringing emissions down, and governments, scientists, and economists around the world agree, but what if they're wrong? Never mind that countries such as Sweden, which implemented a carbon tax in 1991, have proven such measures are effective and that they actually produce economic benefits; why should we change if we don't have to? Rising gas prices due to global market forces are already hitting us hard enough; why should we add to the misery?

Consider this: If the industry shills and their followers are right and global warming is not the threat we think it is, and we act anyway, the oil will still be there for future use and we'll also have cleaner air and greater innovation in green technologies - along with stronger economies. If the majority of the world's climate scientists are right and we fail to act, we face ecological, social and economic catastrophe on a scale beyond anything we've experienced in modern times.

Consider also that carbon taxes such as British Columbia's and the one the federal Liberals have proposed are actually tax shifts. The money collected from individuals, businesses and industry will be returned in the form of cuts to personal and business taxes. The 2.4 cents a litre increase in gas prices that is one small part of the B.C. tax is minuscule compared to market increases, and the tax may help us move away from continued reliance on increasingly scarce and costly fossil fuels.

Whether it's called a tax shift, a revenue-neutral tax or a new tax, it will get people worked up. No one likes taxes, but we like roads and schools and hospitals and police services, so we pay them. We also pay about $90 a tonne to put garbage into landfills, so why are we so concerned about having to pay to put garbage into the air?

Politicians have two powerful instruments to influence behaviour:

regulation and taxation. In the mindless mantra of anti-taxation groups, taxes are bad and we should always cut and never increase them. The ludicrous aspect is that these groups are silent about the enormous taxpayer subsidies to fossil-fuel and related industries that make windfall profits while resisting even a small tax hike.

Together with measures such as a cap-and-trade program, a carbon tax can use money from industries that are not energy-efficient to create economic benefits and incentives for those that are wiser in their energy use. The income generated by a carbon tax can be used to cut income taxes, build more public transit, upgrade trains, develop renewable-energy sources and retrofit homes and buildings with energy-efficient technology.

For 20 years, scientists have warned of the need for urgent action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Leading economists have shown that the cost to bring emissions down will be about one per cent of GDP annually, while the costs incurred if we don't reduce emissions could be economically catastrophic.

When politicians, business people and citizens show leadership by proposing or implementing solutions to the very real problems facing the planet (yes, more than 90 per cent certain is as real as it gets in science), they deserve our support, not mockery and politically motivated misinformation. Axe the tax, my ass!

altered. Police believe all of the stolen property is from Calgary.

The property came to the attention of RCMP on Friday when Calgary City Police were contacted by a Calgary business about a stolen vehicle.

The vehicle was equipped with a GPS locator, which was later turned on, providing police with the location of the vehicle.

Throughout the day on Friday, police scouted out the location, observing individuals entering and exiting the property.

Officers later moved in at 8 p.m. that night.

Someone's looking out for Jesse Fuller

Carla Victor/Didsbury Review

SURVIVOR – Jesse Fuller is a survivor, he recently recovered from a near-drowning at Didsbury Aquatic Centre and has survived a tragic car accident at the age of four.

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

It's seldom that a person experiences their vital signs reduced to almost nothing and lives to talk about it.

With almost three decades spacing the incidents, Jesse Fuller has done that twice.

It's a warm Friday morning, and Jesse breaks from resting to meet in the living room at his Didsbury home to discuss his unusual life.

His parents were both passionate members of the hippie movement in the 1970s, and noted for their unique talents and community involvement.

For the young Fullers who lived on Canada's east coast, Jesse explains travelling together became a family ritual.

His memories of the incident are understandably vague, but the Fuller's last vacation together was when he was four years old.

The foursome were on their way back to Nova Scotia, after exploring Colorado, when a reckless decision altered Jesse's life forever.

"This guy got into a fight with his girlfriend," Jesse says.

"He stole a tow truck, and didn't look where he was going when he pulled out of a gas station."

The angered man in the tow truck broadsided the Fullers, killing Jesse's parents and sister.

Jesse slipped into a coma, that he drifted in and out for five months, including his fifth birthday.

"My vital signs were nothing, my blood pressure was down to less than 10 per cent of what it should have been."

If he was successful in surviving, doctors believed he'd be spending the rest of his days in a wheelchair.

"They thought when I left the hospital, that was as good as I was going to get."

But with the aid of his godparents, who eventually adopted him, for about five months following his release, Jesse learned to eat and walk again.

"They were very determined - the wheelchair stayed in the car when we got home...by the time I went back for a checkup, I was walking around on my own, and doctors were absolutely astounded."

Jesse says, he thinks there may be a different mental approach for adults who recuperate from physical trauma compared to when children do.

Jesse

"I see with my son right now, he's so eager to learn everything. Maybe we as adults, we're not as eager to learn everything. We're just content to stay where we are.

"We're more likely to believe our diagnosis when we're adults, as kids we don't know the difference."

The only lingering effects from the incident that took his parents and sister, are scars, eye troubles, and most seriously, severe memory deficit.

"It's the kind where you're told something, and if you don't write it down, nine times out of 10 you'll forget it," he says.

"It's frustrating."

The local man's most recent survival came at the Didsbury Memorial Complex two weeks ago.

He was at the swimming pool with his son, and decided to use one of the swing-ropes to launch himself into the pool.

He swung back and forth to get his momentum, hoping to give himself enough of a push to reach the point in the water where he could touch the bottom.

He let go sooner than he normally would, thinking he could catch his breath on the way down.

"But you fall pretty fast, and as I was halfway through my breath, I went under the water and started to breathe it in."

Jesse inhaled water instantly, forcing him to sink quickly.

"I remember struggling a bit, but I was like a rock still sinking. It didn't matter what I did with my hands or my feet.

"I couldn't see anything around me or hear anything."

As water continued to flood Jesse's lungs, he wondered if this was his time.

"There was a point where I thought, 'this might be it,' so I said a prayer for my family...I didn't know if I was going to be back or not."

Good Samaritans and lifeguards played a part in retrieving Jesse's body from the bottom.

His next memory came while stretched out on the pool deck.

"I was throwing up water and kind of delirious," he remembered.

Jesse says, he tried to fight off paramedics and get back into the water.

"I didn't know a whole lot of time had passed, and thought my son was still in there," he pauses. "But I probably was delirious at the time - because who would jump back in the pool while they were still throwing up water?"

Jesse was rushed to the Didsbury Hospital, before then bolting to a Calgary hospital via ambulance.

His condition, including a case of white lung, was daunting.

But once again, Jesse displayed the ability to shove rationale expectations aside.

"They told me when I left, I was the first person that they ever had walk out of the Intensive Care Unit." In addition to others involved in his rescue, Jesse is quick to credit his son, Christian for his heroics.

"He was the one who called for help," he said. "He saw me at the bottom of the pool, and thought I was dead. To see me a month, I wanted to know. If this was how I was going to live my life, I should at least know how Jesus lived His."

However, since the collision, Jesse had been consistently reminded by Christians and non-Christians, "you must be here for a reason."

Jesse thought about this.

"These are things where you look back and realize that it's a turning point in your life. You know, that was something definite that I know God had to be involved in. No matter how much people love you or want you back, I don't think people have very much say in that. When our time comes, our time comes. We're allowed to go through struggles like this. Sometimes it's to teach us something, and other times it's to teach the people around us something."

- JESSE FULLER

couple of days later and know that dad's still here, is a huge thing."

While Jesse attended Christian camps as a child, his most significant step to finding his faith was when he encountered new friends during his first year of college.

"I had that emotion that a lot of Christians get. I was very excited when I first got to know Christ and went through the New Testament in a month. I wanted to know. If this was how I was going to live my life, I should at least know how Jesus lived His."

However, since the collision, Jesse had been consistently reminded by Christians and non-Christians, "you must be here for a reason."

Jesse thought about this.

"These are things where you look back and realize that it's a turning point in your life. You know, that was something definite that I know God had to be involved in. No matter how much people love you or want you back, I don't think people have very much say in that. When our time comes, our time comes. We're allowed to go through struggles like this. Sometimes it's to teach us something, and other times it's to teach the people around us something."

Jesse, who has since told his story in church, is enthusiastic to talk about what he's come back from.

"I think it's something important. Not that I'm anything special, I just hope people can grab something from my story."

But Jesse's story continues, with his third chance at life.

And as he looks back on what he's been through, Jesse can't help but be grateful for what he has.

"I get to raise my children, and that's every parent's dream."

What you need to know about West Nile virus

"I ended up being sick for three weeks, and the most frightening part was not knowing if it would keep getting worse."

- Coreen, Bow Island, AB
 West Nile fever survivor

West Nile virus remains a health concern for all Albertans. Those over the age of 50 are at greater risk of becoming seriously ill when infected with West Nile virus.

- Your best protection is insect repellent with DEET. Used as directed, DEET has an excellent safety record.
- Products with lemon eucalyptus oil are effective for shorter periods of time.
- Wear long-sleeved shirts and pants at dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.

Didsbury Aqua-Jets/Calgary Swordfish meet a success

The Didsbury Aqua-Jets and Calgary Swordfish Summer Swimming Clubs held their joint swim meet on Saturday June 14 at the Didsbury Aquatic Centre. In attendance were approximately 230 swimmers and their families from across our region. 22 of our 32 swimmers participated in 72 individual swims and 6 team relays throughout the day. We had an excellent showing with 5 first place, 7 second place and 3 third place finishes.

This year our club has instituted a reward program whereby swimmers from our club receive a medal for obtaining at least 2 best times on previous swims - not a small feat as every second counts. 3 swimmers received this medal at our home meet. This year the medals were donated by 4 E's Oilfield Services Inc. and Medallion Trophies donated the engraving.

Our swimmers will have 5 more meets in surrounding communities at which to hone their skills for the Regional meet (Provincial qualifier) held in Calgary on August 2 & 3. Provincials are being held in Edmonton on August 16 & 17.

The Club is very pleased to announce that Nicole Smetaniuk will be competing at the Alberta Summer Games on August 9 & 10 in Medicine Hat, Alberta. Go Nicole!!

For information on our club visit www.assa.ab.ca or call Anne at 403-335-4730 or Janet at 403-335-9867.

LARSON

Georgina Margaret (Mamie) Nielson-Larson of Olds, AB passed away at the Olds Long Term Care Centre on Sunday, July 12th, 2008 at the age of 91 years. Margaret will be lovingly remembered by her two sons: Paul (Yvonne) of Lundbreck, AB and Ken (Fern) of Stettler, AB, one daughter: Neva (Norm) of Didsbury, AB as well as nine grandchildren and nineteen great grandchildren. Margaret will also be missed by her three brothers: Don (Ruby) of Olds, AB, Paul (Joyce) of Castor, AB and Dick (Joan) of Parkville, B.C.; three sisters: Eleanor, Hilda and Rose all of Red Deer, AB. Margaret was predeceased by her husband Mel in December 2007; son, Lyle (Butch) in September 2007; a sister, Mabel; brothers, Marten and Alfred. Georgina Margaret "Mamie" Larson was born February 12th, 1917 at her parents' homestead near Cornucopia, AB. She was the first of ten children born to Mabel Eva Caldwell and Marius Christian Neilson. When Mamie was five years old the family moved to a new quarter section, two and a half miles south east of Halkirk, AB. She attended school in Halkirk and was one of the few of her generation to complete her grade 12 education. Mamie went on to Camrose Normal School (1935 - 1936) taking a one year course to become a teacher. When she was nineteen she became acquainted with a neighbor boy Martin Elvin Larson. They courted and were married on December 23, 1938 at his parents' home. Mel and Mamie's first home was a two room bunk house on his dad's farm. They started a family and once the children were in school, Mamie returned to teaching; she taught at different schools throughout Paintearth County. In 1971, Mel and Mamie retired from the farm and moved to Red Deer. In Red Deer, Mamie taught at Red Deer Christian School until she retired in the 1980's. Mamie enjoyed travelling around the countryside with Mel taking pictures for him to draw. She spent hours knitting and reading while Mel did his art. She also looked after the "old people" in their various condos. Mamie's final years were spent in Sunrise Village at Olds, AB and later the Long Term Care Facility in the Olds Hospital. She passed away peacefully with her family by her side. She lived a wonderful life, doing what she loved - making a difference in people's lives. A Memorial Service for the late Georgina Margaret "Mamie" Larson will be held at Cross Roads Church, 38105 Range Road #275, (west of the Red Deer 32nd Street Overpass on Hwy #2) Red Deer County, AB on Friday, July 18th, 2008 at 11:00 a.m. Memorial donations may be made to the Salvation Army, 4837 - 54 Street, Red Deer, AB T4N 2G5. Condolences can be forwarded to the family at www.parklandfuneralhome.com. In living memory of Georgina Margaret "Mamie" Larson, a tree will be planted in the Parkland Funeral Home and Crematorium Memorial Tree Park. Arrangements entrusted to Parkland Funeral Home and Crematorium, phone: 1-800-481-7421.
